Skunk News You Can Use!

Holiday Edition!

Happy Holidays To Everyone!

I'm sure everyone is starting to get in gear for the holiday madness. I thought this would be a good time to let everyone know about some great holiday ideas. I hope everyone creates wonderful memories of their time together with family and friends, but also remembers to take a moment to think about our pets' needs, especially our skunks.

Skunks are generally quiet natured and don't like a lot of noise or disturbance. If you are having a lot of friends and family over, it might be a good idea to make sure your skunk has a quiet, dark place to go away from the hustle and bustle. Unless you have a skunk that is very outgoing and used to strangers, it is best to not force them to be a part of the festivities.

Remember also that your skunk could possibly pick up an illness from one of your guests, so keeping him out of a crowded room of strangers is the best course of action. It could also prevent your loved one from being accidentally stepped on.

You might also want to check with your veterinarian about their holiday office hours and what you should do in case of an emergency. Holidays are notorious for sudden illness and poisonings. Speaking of poisoning, don't forget that lots of plants are poisonous to pets, so keep those plants off of the floor.

Don't forget that keeping a bag of Stomp! on hand can eliminate the stress of making time to prepare your skunk's meals while you're busily preparing for the holiday meals.

If you or your veterinarian does not have a copy of the safe meds list and/or the current blood values, you can go to <http://www.strippedbandits.com/request-information.html> to request they be sent to you.

Don't forget to tell your veterinarian about the new skunk vet site www.skunkvetcare.org.
